

Late complications of radiation therapy will become more common as treatment of neoplasms in childhood becomes more successful. A patient with a successfully treated wilms tumour presented with hypertension years after therapy angiography revealed extensive damage to the aorta and left CIA, probably caused by the radiation therapy the hypertension was the result of RAS.